

Dr. Bradley J Oostindie is the founder and clinical director of Ready To Focus Neurofeedback. As a graduate of the Wheaton College Graduate School (M.A.) and the California Southern University clinical psychology programs (Psy.D.), he has been in practice for over 25 years. In 2005, he received specialized training in neurofeedback at the ADD Centre in Toronto with Dr. Linda Thompson, one of the leaders in the neurofeedback field. Since that time, he has specialized in the field of neurofeedback and biofeedback, working with thousands of neurofeedback clients and developing programs to administer the treatment in academic, office, and home-based settings.

His previous work includes serving as a staff psychologist at DeVos Children's Hospital in Grand Rapids, Michigan where duties included neuropsychological testing and assessment as well as behavioral counseling interventions with children. During that time, his work on neuropsychological deficits in children with cystic fibrosis (CF) was presented at the CF national conference and the abstract was subsequently published in the Journal of Pediatric Pulmonology. Dr. Oostindie has also provided psychological services in inpatient and outpatient practice settings serving children, adolescents, and adults.

At this time, Dr. Oostindie oversees neurofeedback programming at Ready To Focus in both the office and home-based settings. Additionally, he provides training to other therapists who desire to utilize neurofeedback as a treatment intervention. He regularly speaks at conferences on the topic of neurofeedback and other issues related to childhood behavioral issues and education.
